Getting access to journals

Journals

Journals are available in print and online from a number of different providers. Because users cannot be expected to know what is available and how to get access to it, we use a journals list. This list is used when you want to find out what access there is to specific journal titles. If you want to search for information on a topic, search databases like UpToDate, DynaMed, NHS Evidence and Medline.

Accessing the journals list

Go to www.uhl-library.nhs.uk/journals and login with your NHS username and password. This will ensure that you get all of the information that is relevant to you. You can also get to this login page from our library website: www.uhl-library.nhs.uk

Searching the journals list

Use the search box rather than browsing by letter as the list is so long. Just enter one or more words from the journal title in the search box and click on 'Search'.

About E-Journals

My Journals gives you: access to full text electronic journals and e-books available to NHS staff, free at the point of use; details of print journals available in your local health library.

Brief User guide

You can search for full text journal titles that are available to you using title keywords in the search box. You can search for a title phrase, for keywords at the start of a journal title or for all title keywords.

Use the 'journals starting with' browse to look for titles beginning

Access routes

There are 3 different access routes to the fulltext of articles.

In print

If the result says that the fulltext is available in print at one of our libraries (example below) then either come to read/copy it or ask us to send you a copy. The link simply takes you to a page with more information about requesting articles available in print.

Lancet

ISSN: 0140-6736

Available in print at Glenfield Hospital Library

Print starts in 1968 and ends in 2016 (starts issue 387 and ends issue 10026)

Online

If the result doesn't say that the fulltext is available in print, then it will look something like the examples below. Whatever the link text says, clicking on the link should take you to the fulltext provider. Once on their site, you may need to find the 'Athens' link to complete the login process but some sites will log you in automatically. This can be a confusing process so don't hesitate to contact one of the libraries of you have any problems accessing online journal articles.

Lancet

ISSN: 0099-5355

Available from Lancet in MEDLINE with Full Text

Fulltext starts 29/Aug/1998 and ends 31/Dec/2006

Lancet, The

ISSN: 0140-6736

Available from The Lancet

Fulltext starts in 2008 (starts volume 371 issue 9606)

On request

Some results appear to suggest articles are available in print but mention being available on request from 'British Library' or 'NULJ'. These are not held by us but we can try and get them for you. Just ask us and we'll try and get them and let you know if there are any copyright restrictions. The link simply takes you to a page with more information.
